Up from the Scavenges: The Story of the Sto. Niño Community

During the 1970's, a place near the Tullahan River in Malabon used to be an area where garbage of most of the nearby communities of the town was dumped. People started to move and live near and in the place and made scavenging a form of living. From scraps, plastic bottles, papers and cartons, pioneering settlers claimed the space and eventually lived in the area for good. In year 1982, with significant population have built houses along the river banks, Sto. Niño community was then founded. With a small church at the heart of the trashland, people organize groups and initiated their own community programs.

As years passed, people from the provinces found Sto. Niño a good place to settle; urbanization and modern way of living have given the community a chance to develop socio-economically. At present, with the strong bond of people with each other, with the presence of a church, and the continuous to grow as a community of love and hope - humbled by blessings from God and their fellows.

Sto. Niño is the one that has been a beneficiary of FIAT Sto. Niño Mission since the organization's inception.
